

CRISTIANO GIORDA

University of Turin - Department of "Philosophy and Education Science"

Full Professor in Geography

INSTITUTIONAL ROLES

President of the Piedmont section and national adviser of the Italian Association of Geography Teachers (AIIG)

MAIN RESEARCH INTERESTS

Geographical Education and Values:
territory (place), citizenship, sustainability, inter-culturalism.
Didactics of Geography; interdisciplinarity between History and Geography.

ACADEMIC CAREER

Researcher, Associate Professor and currently Full Professor, he teaches "Geography" and "Teaching of geography" in the Degree course in Primary Education at the University of Turin. For the AIIG he deals with the subject of the interdisciplinary relationships between history and geography, teacher training and the development of the website and digital communication platforms. He is the author of around 100 publications (books, monographs. Other research topics: new information and communication technologies: representation and structuring of digital space in connection with material spaces. Landscape: perception, representation and transformation processes (in particular the rural landscape), local development. Visual Studies and representation of space (in particular, in cinema and teaching). Geography and religion (in particular: sacred places and monasteries).